Increasing your health and prosperity with Feng Shui

FENG SHUI YOUR LIVING ROOM

FOR BETTER QUALITY OF LIVING

The next room you enter in a house is usually the living room. This room determines the energy of the house. Most modern families concentrate their activities here: receiving guests, watching TVs, reading, playing, listening to music to displaying work of arts, family portraits, and collectibles. It becomes the shrine of the house, the source of display items and pride for each family to entertain their guests and mark the uniqueness and achievements of family members. Therein lies the significance of this room to your family's well being. Below are some practical guides to get your living room works for a better quality of life!

1. BE VIBRANT! LIVING TO YOUR FULLEST !

With many space constraints and budget limitations, living room should be your main priority. Why? Because if you place your living room in a good position in the house and arrange it correctly, this will determine the wealth you are receiving for the house. According to the flying star Feng Shui, good water star activation correlates to your wealth quality. And what better way to activate your water stars than with the televisions, audio and hifi sets combined with some water features on the living room coffee table! You can also use your fan as good energy trigger when you put it correctly.

But most importantly, living room serves as the best wealth sector activator because of the many activities people do there. Remember that movements and activities of people is the best energy trigger for Feng Shui.

2. LIGHTS, LIGHTS, PLENTY OF LIGHTS

Because the nature of the living room is for activities and wealth energizer, you need to shower the room with ample of yang energy. Let the daylight in; create as much opening as possible and use lightweight, semi-translucent curtains/ blinds. Do not use heavy and dark colours for the walls; leave it light and bright.

Having fabric as your coffee table instead of glass or wood would create softer edges and thus a more feng shui friendly solution!

3. STORAGE SOLUTIONS = NO CLUTTERING

Your living room will also house a lot of things: books, toys, and knickknacks (especially for those with small children!) therefore it is important to think of storage solutions to minimise clutter and things spreading all over the place. When you have limited space, it is also important not to overcrowd the space with too many bulky furnitures either to ensure maximum Qi flow.

4. PLACEMENT OF WATER FEATURES

Living room is the best place in the house to place your water feature for a wealth sector activation. This can be done through numerous ways such as water fountains or aquariums. However calculations must be done to ensure you place your water at the correct spot, and you can do this through a professional feng shui analysis

5. GOOD PLACEMENT OF TV / STEREO SETS

Similar to water feature, TV and stereo sets act as a wealth sector activator. Therefore it is best to check whether you have put your TV and stereo sets at the correct sector in the living room, so that the energy it brings will be beneficial to your wealth instead of disrupting your health!

6. Colour scheme + materials

Your living room ideally should reflect your favourable colours and materials in terms of five elements. Usually this is based on the breadwinner of the family, but through good design and feng shui you can actually incorporate a combination of two to three elements through selection of colours and materials as seen at the picture on the right

LAST NOTE

Living room is indeed the key of your wealth, therefore maximise its arrangements, colour scheme and materials used through proper calculations of Feng Shui such as flying star method, combined with the Bazi of the occupants to find out the best elements to use. Good luck!
